Though it would never happen, it sure would be nice to have at least a semblance of choice in the OS market.

I would love to use an IBM version of XP, heh. Even an AOL version, Compaq, HP, any first to third tier manufacturer would be able to license Windows to make their own version.

Microsoft would still make money on licensing fee's, still have over site control of the standards, and we would at least be able to honestly pretend to have a choice in OS's.
